

WOMEN SAW MAN DECAPITATED

Patrick Cochrane, Engineer of Crosby Street Building, Instantly Killed in Shaft by Elevator Weight.

HAD GONE UPSTAIRS TO REPAIR MACHINE.

Got His Head in Path of Mass of Metal, and Before the Elevator Could Be Stopped It Had Crushed Him.

A descending elevator weight sliced the head from the body of Patrick Cochrane, engineer in the factory at No. 156 Crosby street, to-day. The screams of two women who were on the elevator alarmed everybody in the building, which is nine stories high, and for nearly an hour, while the employees were working to extricate the body, the place was demoralized.

There was something wrong with the mechanism of one of the elevators, and Cochrane was sent to fix it. The elevator was at the third floor. He went into the shaft at the fourth floor and lowered himself to the roof of the car. This elevator was in charge of Charles Peck, of No. 190 Monroe street. The next elevator was run by Henry Miller. Two women boarded it to go to the seventh floor and Miller started up.

The weight of Miller's elevator ran in a groove immediately back of the elevator on which Cochrane was at work. Miller knew that Cochrane was in the next shaft, but had no idea of danger, nor had any one else.

It happened that Cochrane, in an effort to see what was the trouble with the elevator on which he was standing, leaned out and looked down the groove just in time to encounter the descending weight. His head was cut off and his body was jammed between the roof of the car and the wall of the building. Miller felt the car and stopped his car at the sixth floor so abruptly that the women passengers were thrown to the floor. Then he ran his car down to the fifth floor, releasing the damper, leaving the engineer's body crushed back of Peck's car. As this car could not be moved on account of the damaged machinery the extrication of the corpse was tedious work.

Cochrane's address is not known. He has a brother, a patrolman, whose beat includes the Crosby street factory. The brother had just gone off watch when the accident happened and could not be found.

RELIGIOUS MANIA SEIZES FATHER

George Beyers Appears at Breakfast, Hatchet in Hand, to Offer Up One of His Family as a Sacrifice.

After trying to offer up a member of his family as a religious sacrifice to-day, George Beyers, twenty-eight years old, was sent to the pavilion for the insane at Bellevue.

Beyers lived with his father, a wealthy dealer in building supplies, at No. 108 Stebbins avenue, in the Bronx. Several years ago he had saved $500, and intended marrying a young woman of a neighboring family. But the building and loan association in which he had invested his savings failed, and that affected his mind.

Since then he has had many delusions, the most recent of which was that he was the Christ. He insisted on dressing in rags and in fasting, so that now he is hardly more than a skeleton. While the family was at breakfast this morning he appeared with a hatchet and called for a volunteer to be offered as a sacrifice. The family fled and returned with two policemen who took charge of Beyers. Magistrate Zeller ordered him sent to Bellevue.

CARRIE NATION CHALLENGES DOWIE

Offers Him $500 to Meet Her in Joint Debate concerning His Right to the Title of "Elijah III."

Carrie Nation has challenged old Dr. Dowie to a joint debate. She is so anxious to meet him that she will furnish the hall and give him $500 if he will consent to go on the platform with her and extol words.

The debate in which Mrs. Nation wishes to participate concerns the right of Dowie to use the title "Elijah III." She has written him a letter which he has failed to answer and now she is out with a challenge, in which she says: "If you have anything to say for yourself, or any scripture text with which to defend your claim, I am willing to meet you in public to challenge it or debate the question with you."

"You have come before the people with broad and bold assertions. In the name of justice it is demanded they be investigated."

Mrs. Nation quotes copiously from the Bible to prove that Dowie's claim is a false one. In conclusion she says: "At all my meetings I invite people to meet me on the 30th. On the contrary, you contradict me and abuse me as a hypocrite."

KILDARE AT PLAY TURNS ROMANTIC

Bowery Kipling's Heart Is Touched by Fair Member of Harrigan Company and He Dreams of a Quiet Home.

"LIGHTS OF HOME" COMING.

E. J. Soth to Appear in Ten Acts from as Many Plays in Afternoon and Evening Benefit Performance.

There seems fair promise of a romance growing out of the visit of Owen Kildare, "The Bowery Kipling," to the Harrigan show at the Murray Hill Theatre. Doesn't this sound as if Lizzie Lutz had won his heart?

"There's a dame in the first act of 'Under Cover' that you wouldn't like to get for a valentine unless you'd been off the water wagon for a long time and could trust your senses, but she makes you laugh; honest, she does. There's hundreds of girls over on the east side as well, no better looking than her—but you people think it's caricatures, because all you know about the east side is what they tell you about it in stories that's all poetry and no truth."

"Now, this dame—I think her name is Elton—wasn't such a much until the boss, that's Harrigan, dug her up somewhere in the country. I think it was in Brooklyn, where she was playing a leading part—she was the first to come on of the tra-la-las—and was saying, 'yes, yes,' all by herself with the others. And now she's made a hit, and I can see her finish without being one of them futurity chancers. She'll get the mumps under her locks and it'll be 'I made a hit, but the other Kipling aint out o' business in spite of it.'"

A true Daughter of the Revolution will play one of the principal parts in Lotie Blair Parker's new play, "Lights of Home," which will be produced at the Fourteenth Street Theatre Monday evening. She is Miss Grace Noble, granddaughter of Abel Noble, who, during the Revolutionary war, manufactured the huge iron chain which was stretched across the Hudson River at West Point to prevent the passage of British warships. Miss Noble was born in Warwick, N. Y., twenty-five years ago. She studied for the stage at Ryder's school, in London, and numbers among her accomplishments the ability to speak French, German, Italian and Spanish.

The children playing with Maxine Elliott in "Her Own Way" are all remarkably bright youngsters, and, in fact, each one considers herself—not forgetting the one boy—almost as clever as any of the older players. The boy, Donald Galt, is about eight, and in one of the scenes of the play has to ride a big hobby horse. The other day Miss Elliott, thinking to please the youngster, said to him: "Donald, I'll tell you what I'll do if you're a good boy. I'll buy you a horse just like this."

The youngster looked at her rather pitifully. "My dear Miss Elliott," he said, "you must understand I do this hobby-horse business because it is in the part—not from choice."

Two incongruous appearances before the curtain have been made this week Monday night Henry Irving in his weird, sepulchral make-up of Dante, came out at the Broadway Theatre and made a "speech" which, he frankly and correctly stated, seemed to be expected of him, and at another time he walked forward and bowed after Dante had been stabbed, a la Polonius, through a curtain, and with the red splootch on his shirt absurdly conspicuous.

Tuesday night Kyrie Bellew, without coat or waistcoat, after Raffia's ruse, also made his way before the curtain and placed himself on colloquial terms with the audience.

This sort of thing may be very pleasant, but in some cases it strikes the disillusioned spectator as a trifle ridiculous.

A unique entertainment will be presented in behalf of the Actors' Home by E. H. Sothern and Daniel Frohman on the afternoon and evening of Friday, Nov. 13, at the New Lyceum Theatre.

On that day Mr. Sothern, Miss Loftus, and other members of his company, will appear in an act from no less than ten of the principal plays in which Mr. Sothern has appeared in the past under Daniel Frohman's management at the old Lyceum. In the afternoon the programme will include the second act of "The Highest Bidder," the first act of "If I Were King," the third act of Jerome K. Jerome's play "The Master of Woodbarrow," the last act of "Richard and Lovelace," and a new one-act play adapted by Mr. Sothern from Robert Louis Stevenson's story of "Markheim." For the evening the entertainment will consist of acts from "Lord Chumley," the closet scene from "Hamlet," the second act of "The Proud Prince," the fourth act of Hauptmann's "The Sunken Bell," and the third act of "Captain Letterblair."

George W. Parsons, in "A Turkish Texan," will make his New York stellar appearance at the Madison Square Theatre following the engagement of Jessie Millward in "A Clean Slate." George Drew Mendum will be Mr. Parsons's leading woman.

At rehearsal of "A Fool and His Money," the other morning George Henry Trader turned to Louise Allen and asked if she remembered the time when she mixed things up in "Tribby." The Australian came had just returned and was playing the Du Maurier play in Brooklyn. Ricca Allen, a sister of Louise, who is now with the Nance O'Neil company, was dancing the can-can. One night as Mr. Trader was rushing on with Miss Allen, he discovered something peculiar about her. She seemed a bit smaller. "What's the matter with you?" he inquired. She only smiled, and then, to his horror, he noticed it wasn't the same old smile. "How about the dance?" he asked breathlessly as they reached the wings. "Try me," she answered, and both went on with the dance, which, from its very nerve, went better than ever, even if Louise Allen was dancing her sister's role.

Winter Cottons

Summer doesn't monopolize all the Cottons. Of course, the very filmy, ethereal weaves are retired when the weather blows cold—but there are many heavy weights that are important to women's dress during the winter. These stuffs are given a fine showing in the base ment. Among them are:

5c. for 12½c. and 15c. Flannelettes, darkish grounds and scores of tartan plaids that simulate worsteds, 32 and 36 inches wide.

9c. for 15c. Fleece-back Oxford Waists, fresh and bright out of their cases, hundreds of neat printings on white and tinted grounds.

14c. for "Duvette" Flannelettes—they are extra heavy and look like elderdown—splendid for kimono, bath robes and house gowns—a broad variety of patterns and colorings; also solid pink, sky, oxblood, helio, cardinal, navy, black and white.
